

HIN

Climbing to a hilly steep,
He views his herds in vales afar. Dryden
Lo! how the Norick plains
Rise hilly, with large piles of slaughter'd knights. Phillips Hilly countries afford the most entertaining prospects, tho' aman would chuse to travel through a plain one. Addison HILT. n. f. [pile, Saxon, from healban, to hold.] The handle of anything, particularly of a sword.
Now sits expectation in the air,
And hides a sword from hilt unto the point,
With crowns imperial; crowns and coronets,
Promis'd to Harry and his followers. Shakef. Henry V.
Take thou the hilt,
And when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now,
Guide thou the sword. Shakef. Julius Caesar.
Be his this sword, whose blade of brads displays
A ruddy gleam; whose hilt, a silver blaze. Pope's Odyssey.
HIM. [him, Saxon.]
1. The oblique case of he.
Me he reformed unto my office, and him he hanged. Gen. xli.
2. Him was anciently used for it in a neutral sense.
HIMSELF. pron. [him and self.]
1. In the nominative the same as he, only more emphatical.
It was a sparing speech of the ancients to say, that a friend is another himself; for that a friend is far more than him- self. Bacon
With flame remembers, while himself was one
Of the same herd, himself the same had done. Denham
2. In ancient authors it is used neutrally for itself.
She is advanced
Above the clouds as high as heav'n himself. Shakefpeare.
3. In the oblique cases it has a reciprocal signification.
I perceive it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set awork by a reprovable badness in himself. Shakef. K. Lear.
4. It is sometimes not reciprocal.
Nothing in nature can so peculiarly gratify the noble dispositions of humanity, as for one man to see another so much himself as to sigh his griefs, and groan his pains, to sing his joys, and do and feel every thing by sympathy. South.
HIN. n. f. [.] A measure of liquids among Jews, containing about ten pints.
With the one lamb a tenth deal of flour, mingled with the fourth part of an hin of beaten oil. Ex. xxix. 40.
HIND. adj. compar. hinder; superl. hindmost. [bynban, Saxon.] Backward; contrary in position to the face: as, hind legs. See HINDER and HINDMOST.
Bringing its tail to its head, it bends its back so far 'till its head comes to touch its hind part, and so with its armour gathers itself into a ball. Ray on the Creation.
The flag
Hears his own feet, and thinks they sound like more,
And fears his hind legs will o'ertake his fore. Pope.
HIND. n. f. [bynne, Saxon, from hinnus, Latin.]
1. The she to a flag; the female of red deer.
How he flew, with glancing dart amidst,
A gentle hind, the which the lovely boy
Did love as life. Fairy Queen, b. i.
Canst thou mark when the hinds do calve? Job xxxix. 1.
Nor Hercules more lands or labours knew,
Not though the brazen-footed hind he flew. Dryden's Æn.
2. [bynne, Saxon.] A servant.
A couple of Ford's knaves, his hinds, were called forth by their mistress, to carry me in the name of foul cloaths to Datchet-lane. Shakefpeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.
3. [byneman, Saxon.] A peasant; a boor; a mean rustick.
The Dutch, who came like greedy hinds before,
To reap the harvest their ripe ears did yield,
Now look like thofe, when rolling thunders roar,
And sheets of lightning blast the standing field. Dryden.
He cloth'd himself in coarse array,
A lab'ring hind in fiew. Dryden's Fables.
HINDERIES. n. f. The same as raspberries. Ainsworth.
To HINDER. v. a. [bynban, Saxon.] To obstruct; to stop;
to let; to impede.
Hinder me not, seeing the Lord hath prospered my way.
Gen. xxiv. 56.
The whole world shined with clear light, and none were hindered in their labour. Wisd. xvii. 20.
You minims of hindring knot-grafs made If the alms were hindered only by intreaty, the hinderer is not tied to restitution, because intreaty took not liberty away from the giver. Taylor's Rule of Living holy.
This objection hinders not but that the heroic action of some commander, enterprised for the Christian cause, and executed happily, may be written. Dryden's Juv. Dedicat.
What hinders younger brothers, being fathers of families, from having the same right? Locke.
HINDER. adj. [from hind.] That which is in a position contrary to that of the face.

HIN

These beasts, fighting with any man, stand upon their hinder feet, and so this did, being ready to give me a shrewd embracement. Sidney, b. i.
As the hinder feet of the horse stuck to the mountain, while the body reared up in the air, the poet with great difficulty kept himself from sliding off his back. Addison's Guardian.
HYNDERANCE. n. f. [from hinder.] Impediment; let; stop;
obstruction.
False opinions, touching the will of God to have things done, are wont to bring forth mighty and violent practices against the hinderances of them, and those practices new opinions more pernicious than the first; yea, most extremely sometimes opposite to the first. Hooker's Preface.
They must be in every Christian church the same, except mere impossibility of so having it be the hinderance. Hooker.
What hinderance have they been to the knowledge of what is well done? Dryden's Duffenoy.
Have we not plighted each our holy oath,
One soul should both inspire, and neither prove
His fellow's hindrance in pursuit of love? Dryden.
He must conquer all these difficulties, and remove all these hinderances out of the way that leads to justice. Atterbury.
HYNDERER. n. f. [from hinder.] He or that which hinders or obstructs.
Brakes, great hinderers of all plowing, grow. May.
lets, degenerate animal. [from hind or hinder.] A paltry, worthless, degenerate animal.
HYNDERMOST. adj. [This word seems to be less proper than hindmost.] Hindmost; last; in the rear.
He put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Lesh and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindmost. Gen.
Like to an enter'd tide, they all rush by,
And leave you hindmost. Shakef. Troilus and Cressida.
HYNDMOST. adj. [and and most.] The last; the lag; that which comes in the rear.
'Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man, Whate'er occasion keeps him from us now. Shakef. H. VI.
He met thee by the way, and smote the hindmost of these,
even all that were feeble behind. Deutr. xxv. 18.
Let him retire, betwixt two ages cast,
The first of this, and hindmost of the last,
A loving gamester. Dryden's Aurengze. Prologue.
The race by vigour, not by vaunts is won;
So take the hindmost, hell—he said, and run. Pope.
HINGE. n. f. [or hinge, from hangle or hang.]
1. Joints upon which a gate or door turns.
At the gate
Of heav'n arriv'd, the gate self-open'd wide,
On golden hinges turning. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. v.
Then from the hinge their flocks the gates divorce,
And where the way they cannot find, they force. Danham.
Heav'n's imperious queen shot down from high;
At her approach the brazen hinges fly,
The gates are forc'd. Dryden's Æn.
2. The cardinal points of the world, East, West, North, and South.
If when the moon is in the hinge at East,
The birth breaks forward from its native rest;
Full eighty years, if you two years abate,
This station gives. Creech's Manilius.
And these being hinges of the world, create
New powers in stars. Creech's Manilius.
3. A governing rule or principle.
The other hinge of punishment might turn upon a law, whereby all men, who did not marry by the age of five and twenty, should pay the third part of their revenue. Temple.
4. To be off the hinges. To be in a state of irregularity and disorder.
The man's spirit is out of order and off the hinges; and 'till that be put into its right frame, he will be perpetually disquieted. Tillotson, Sermon 4.
To HINGE. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To furnish with hinges.
2. To bend as an hinge.
Be thou a flatterer now, and hinge thy knee;
And let his very breath, whom thou'lt observe,
Blow off thy cap. Shakef. Timon of Athens.
To HINT. v. a. [enter, French. Skinner.] To bring to mind by a slight mention or remote allusion; to mention imperfectly.
Willing to wound, and yet afraid to strike,
Just hint a fault, and hesitate dislike. Pope.
In waking whispers, and repeated dreams,
To hint pure thought, and warn the favour'd soul. Thomson.
To HINT. at. To allude to; to touch slightly upon.
Speaking of Augustus's actions, he still remembers that agriculture ought to be some way hinted at throughout the whole poem. Addison on the Georgicks.
HINT. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. Faint notice given to the mind; remote allusion; distant insuation. Let

HIR

Let him strictly observe the first stirrings and intimations, the first hints and whispers of good and evil, that pass in his heart. South's Sermons.
2. Suggestion; intimation.
On this hint I spake,
She lov'd me for the dangers I had past. Shakef. Othello.
Actions are so full of circumstances, that, as men observe some parts more than others, they take different hints, and put different interpretations on them. Addison's Spectator.
HIP. n. f. [pype, Saxon.]
1. The joint of the thigh; the fleshy part of the thigh.
How now, which of your hips has the most profound sciatica. Shakefpeare's Measure for Measure.
Hippocrates affirmeth of the Scythians, that, using continual riding, they were generally molested with the sciatica, or hip gout. Brown's Vulgar Errours, b. v.
So shepherds use
To fet the same mark on the hip. Hudibras, p. ii.
Both of their found and rotten sheep:
Against a stump his tusk the monster grinds,
And ranch'd his hips with one continu'd wound. Dryden.
2. To have on the hip. [A low phrase.] To have an advantage over another. It seems to be taken from hunting, the hip or haunch of a deer being the part commonly seized by the dogs.
If this poor brach of Venice, whom I cherish
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,
I'll have our Michael Caffio on the hip. Shakef. Othello.
HIP. n. f. [from heope, Saxon.] The fruit of the birar or the dogrose.
Eating hips and drinking watry foam. Hubbard's Tale.
Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots;
The oaks bear masts, the briars scarlet hips. Shakefpeare.
Years of store of haws and hips do commonly portend cold Winters. Bacon's Natural History.
To HIP. v. a. [from hip.]
1. To sprain or shoot the hip.
His horse was hipp'd, with an old motly saddle, and the stirrups of no kindred. Shakef. Taming of the Shrew.
2. HIP-HOP. A cant word formed by the reduplication of hop.
Your different tastes divide our poets cares;
One foot the sock, 't'other the buskin wears;
Thus while he strives to please, he's forc'd to do't,
Like Volcuis hip-hop in a single boot. Congreve.
HIR. interject. An exclamation, or calling to one; the same as the Latin ehi, heus! Ainsworth.
HIR. adj. A corruption of hypochondriack. Ainsworth.
HIPPOCENTAUR. n. f. [ἵππος, centaurus, French.]
A fabulous monster, half horse and half man.
How are poetical fictions, how are hippocentaurs and chimeras to be imaged, which are things quite out of nature, and whereof we can have no notion? Dryden.
HIPPOCRASS. n. f. [ἵπποκράς, French; quasi vinum Hippocratis.]
A medicated wine.
Sack and the well-spiced hippocrass, the wine,
Wallail the bowl with ancient ribbands fine. King.
HIPPOCRATES'S Sleeve. n. f. A woollen bag made by joining the two opposite angles of a square piece of flannel, used to strain syrups and decoctions for clarification. Quincy.
HIPPOGRIF. n. f. [ἵππος, griff, French.]
A winged horse.
He caught him up, and without wing
Of hippogriff bore through the air sublime. Milt. Par. Lost.

horse. An animal found in the Nile.
HIPSHOT. adj. [hip and shot.] Sprained or dislocated in the hip.
Why do you go nodding and wagging so like a fool, as if you were hipshot? says the goote to the gollin. L'Estrange.
HIPSWORT. n. f. [hip and wort.] A plant. Ainsworth.
To HIRE. v. a. [bynan, Saxon.]
1. To procure any thing for temporary use at a certain price.
His sordid avarice rakes
In excrements, and hires the jakes. Dryden's Juvenal.
2. To engage a man to temporary service for wages.
They weigh silver in the balance, and hire a goldsmith, and he maketh it a god. Jf. xvi. 6.
I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms
Are hir'd to bear their slaves. Shakefpeare's Macbeth.
3. To bribe.
Themetes first, 'tis doubtful whether hir'd,
Or so the Trojan destiny requir'd,
Mov'd that the ramparts might be broken down. Dryd. Æn.
4. To engage himself for pay.
They that were full, hir'd out themselves for bread; and they that were hungry, ceased. 1 Sa. ii. 5.
HIRE. n. f. [byne, Saxon.]
1. Reward or recompence paid for the use of any thing.
2. Wages paid for service.
Great thanks and goodly meed to that good fire;
He thence departing gave for his pains hire. Fairy Queen.

HIS

I have five hundred crowns,
The thrifty hire I sav'd under your father. Shakefpeare.
Though little was their hire, and light their gain,
Yet somewhat to their share he threw. Dryden.
All arts and artists Theseus could command,
Who sold for hire, or wrought for better fame. Dryden.
HIRELING. n. f. [from hire.]
1. One who serves for wages.
The hireling longs to see the shades ascend,
That with the tedious day his toil might end,
And he his pay receive. Sandys.
In the framing of Hiero's ship there were three hundred carpenters employed for a year, besides many other hirelings for carriages. Wilkins's Dædalus.
'Tis frequent here to see a freeborn son
On the left hand of a rich hireling run. Dryd. Juvenal.
2. A mercenary; a prostitute.
Now the shades thy evening walk with bays,
No hireling thee, no prostitute to praise. Pope.
HIRELING. adj. Serving for hire; venal; mercenary; doing what is done for money.
Then trumpets, torches, and a tedious crew
Of hireling mourners for his funeral due. Dryd. Pers. Sat.
HIRE. n. f. [from hire.]
1. One who uses any thing paying a recompence; one who employs others paying wages.
2. In Scotland it denotes one who keeps small horses to let:
HIRSU'TE. adj. [hirsutus, Latin.] Rough; rugged.
There are bulbous, fibrous, and hirsute roots: the hirsute is a middle sort, between the bulbous and fibrous; that, besides the putting forth sap upwards and downwards, putteth forth in round. Bacon's Natural History.
HIS. pronoun possessive. [hyt, Saxon.]
1. The masculine possessive. Belonging to him that was before mentioned.
England his approaches makes as fierce
As waters to the sucking of a gulph. Shakef. Henry V.
If much you note him,
You shall offend him, and extend his passion. Shak. Macb.
Heav'n and yourself
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all,
And all the better is it for the maid;
Your part in her you could not keep from death;
But heav'n keeps his part in eternal life. Shak. Ro. and Jul.
If our father carry authority with such disposition as he bears this last surrender of his, it will but offend us. Shakef.
He that is nourished by the acorns he picked up under an oak in the wood, has appropriated them to himself: nobody can deny but the nourishment is his. Locke.
Whene'er I stoop, he offers at a kiss;
And when my arms I stretch, he stretches his. Addis. Ovid.
2. It was anciently used in a neutral sense, where we now say its.
Who can impress the forest, bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? Shakefpeare's Macbeth.
Not the dreadful spout,
Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear
In his descent. Shakefpeare's Troilus and Cressida.
There's not the smallest orb, which thou beholdest,
But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-ey'd cherubims. Shakefpeare.
This rule is not so general, but that it admitteth his exceptions. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.
Opium loseth some of his poisonous quality, if it be va-poured out, mingled with spirit of wine. Bacon.
3. It is sometimes used as a sign of the genitive case: as, the man his ground, for the man's ground.
Where is this mankind now? who lives to age
Fit to be made Methusalem his page? Denne.
By thy fond comfort, by thy father's cares,
By young Telemachus his blooming years. Pope's Odyssey.
4. It is sometimes used in opposition to this man's.
Were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands,
Desire his jewels, and this other's house. Shakef. Macbeth.
5. Anciently before self.
Every of us, each for his self, laboured how to recover
him. Sidney.
To HISS. v. n. [hissen, Dutch.] To utter a noise like that of a serpent and some other animals. It is remarkable, that this word cannot be pronounced without making the noise which it signifies.
In the height of this bath to be thrown into the Thames, and cool'd glowing hot, in that surge, like a horseshoe; think of that; hissing hot. Shakef. Merry Wives of Windsor.
The merchants shall hiss at thee. Ezek. xxvii. 36.
See the furies arise:
See the snakes that they rear,
How they hiss in their hair. Dryden's Alexander's Feast.
Against the steed he threw
His forceful spear, which, hissing as it flew,
Pierc'd through the yielding planks. Dryden.
To
